Overview

“Nature of Giving,” an upper-division Honors colloquium, will concentrate on two primary learning outcomes. First, students will gain an understanding and appreciation for the meaning/importance of philanthropy. Students will examine the scope and diversity of the philanthropic sector through historical figures like Andrew Carnegie and John D. Rockefeller and current philanthropists Warren Buffett and Bill Gates, who recently co-founded The Giving Pledge—a challenge directed toward the wealthy to give away a majority of their wealth to charitable causes. This work will introduce students from a range of disciplines to the complex roles various foundations currently play in US society and culture, and encourage them to examine further the intersections of philanthropy with policy, the arts, business, law, and society.

Second, students will participate in real philanthropic endeavors. Students will research Fort Worth nonprofit organizations, visit and conduct interviews, develop memoranda, and ultimately, in Scharbauer Hall’s Debate Chamber, argue the merits of each organization under consideration. Students taking the course will help determine the goals of our philanthropy, the number and size of our gift(s), the mode of our awarding the gift(s), and our plans for evaluating the success of our gift(s). The work in this course will affect real lives in meaningful ways, and students will discuss and make moral judgments as they engage micro-decisions while considering macro-consequences. Students will direct and control $100,000 (a donor-funded gift to the course); it is up to the students’ collective wisdom to grant it responsibly under rules we create as a class and with the wisdom of an advisory board representing TCU.

Nature of Giving is designed to prepare students to live thoughtful, philanthropic lives. For some, the course will help students imagine how giving can become a vocation—particularly in non-profit organizations. For all, the course should point out the importance of giving as an avocation in the future.

Course: Chronology and Philanthropic Work

Few universities offer courses in philanthropy or grant making. An even fewer number offer those courses in areas outside business schools, public policy/management programs, and graduate courses. John V. Roach Honors College students taking Nature of Giving are fortunate to have this class because of a donor, one who is funding similar classes at the U of Michigan, the U of Pennsylvania, the U of Texas, the U of Virginia, Princeton, Yale, and Stanford. Because of this gift, TCU students will have the opportunity to both study and practice philanthropy by making substantial grants to a small group of nonprofit organizations.

Over the course of the first 5 weeks, studies of current and historical philanthropists will shape how students evaluate the operational strategies of local philanthropies. Starting week 3 and ending week 10, students will conduct due diligence research on regional nonprofit organizations, picking their personal favorites and assessing those organizations’ potential suitability for receipt of the grant. Guest speakers, including representatives from the Once Upon a Time Foundation, TCU Advancement and Development staff, and last year’s selected organizations will inform our research of regional nonprofit organizations.

For weeks 5 & 6, students will produce and read persuasive written descriptions (memoranda) about nonprofit organizations and vote for 10-14 finalist organizations. For weeks 7-10, students will divide into teams and complete background research (including on-site visits) on the finalist organizations, and then prepare a group presentation for the benefit of other students in the class.

In weeks 11-12 of the course, the five teams will present their persuasive arguments for donating either all or a part of the $100,000 gift to “their” organization in a presentation. Finally, in week 13 and 14, the class will debate the merits of each organization and reach a consensus on which organization(s) should receive funds.

During Dead Days/Finals Week, students will arrange a public presentation of the award(s) to the nonprofit organization(s) and reflect on what they have learned and experienced. Throughout the process, students will present their work to a committee representing various interests at TCU.
Course Objectives and Topoi

- To understand what philanthropy is: who it involves, how it operates, and its history.
- To review the various contexts of philanthropic foundations and how they have evolved into the organizations they are today.
- To analyze and debate the roles and responsibilities of philanthropic foundations.
- To participate in the philanthropic process: research organizations, perform due diligence, make proposals, persuade audiences to your cause, and debate merits, as well as to whom funds should be given.
- To make and discuss moral judgments, to make micro-decisions while considering the macro-consequences.
- To connect readings and discussions to real life through interactions with practitioners.
- To formulate and support an individual opinion on the subject.
- To develop critical analytical thinking and writing skills.
- To communicate effectively and clearly: The colloquium requires students to write persuasively, speak effectively in public, debate ideas, listen carefully, conduct independent research and bring ideas from your own fields of specialization.
- To be professional, you are always representing TCU: The written assignments have length limits because conciseness and professionalism are key. Be mindful of your status as representatives of TCU in all contacts with external organizations.
- To be dependable and present: Because class progress will often depend on your work, it is important to provide assignments on time by whatever means necessary. Even if you have to miss, the class needs your work product—notes, memorandums, and evaluations. Regular attendance is crucial to success in this course. Only official university-sanctioned absences are excused. Students missing class either to represent TCU in a university-mandated activity or attend conferences for professional development should provide official documentation of schedules and turn in work in advance. Two absences will warrant lowering your final grade by a letter grade; three absences will result in your failing the course.
- To be prepared: I expect every course member to read all of the assigned texts in advance of class and prepare for discussion by taking notes. As you read, plan to make at least two contributions to the discussion. A planned contribution is mulled over in advance of class and can take the form of a question, illustration of a point in the reading, a disagreement, or a contrast with other readings.

Responsibilities of Colloquium Members
Respect your colleagues: Once in class, be prepared to listen to and work with colleagues. At all times be prepared to comment on colleague’s statements or to summarize perspectives that have been presented. Always treat seriously any comment offered in earnest. If you disagree with a colleague, clarify your position using appropriate evidence or explanation.

Seek help when needed: Course members are welcome to secure additional help on papers at the William L. Adams Writing Center (ext. 7221). For writing-center information visit <http://www.wrt.tcu.edu/> online. Students who receive tutoring—formal or informal—from individuals or programs other than the William L. Adams Writing Center are responsible for ensuring that the tutoring adheres to ethical standards consistent with those followed at the writing center (e.g., tutors do not write any portion of a student’s paper; tutors do not proofread; tutors do not assist students with take-home exams). Students whose tutoring does not meet such ethical standards violate the university’s code on academic misconduct and are subject to its penalties.

Evaluation

In this class I will meet with you regularly to evaluate your progress. In order to receive a passing grade for this course, you must satisfactorily complete all major assignments on time with a cumulative passing average. Grades will be calculated using the following scale:

- 4.0 = A / 3.67 = A- / 3.33 = B+ / 3.0 = B / 2.67 = B- / 2.33 = C+ / 2.0 = C / 1.67 = D- / 1.33 = D+ / 1.0 = D

Response Papers ........................................................................................................................................ 25%
(Based on readings, discussions, guest speakers, research of local nonprofits, and class participation)

Evaluative White Papers / Memoranda to our Philanthropy .......................................................... 25%
(Concise memoranda designed to persuade other students to consider your favored organization to be one of the finalist organizations.)
Group Presentation........................................................................................................................................... 25%
(15-minute presentation to persuade other students to vote for your organization: 10% for the group as a whole and 15% your own component of the group work).

Final Project / Paper .......................................................................................................................................... 30%
(Based on readings, discussions, guest speakers, and research of local nonprofits)
